Bibliography on Mission in South Africa

By

Rev. Wessel Bentley
2006

Introduction.

South Africa is the child of many missiological approaches. As new developments in South African-, African- and World politics, economic emphases and human self-understanding emerge, Christian missiological approaches need to evolve in order to make the gospel of Christ both accessible and relevant.

In this article, I have compiled a list of resources that may prove helpful to those who would like to engage with modern- and traditional missiological models in the South African context. This is by no means an exhaustive list, but is a good starting point for further research. Most of the material listed form part of post-graduate studies at both South African and Internationally accredited theological institutions.

Methodology.

As a post-graduate student, I have the benefit of having access to several university catalogues. This list is mostly compiled from these catalogues and will therefore be accessible to anyone who is in a reasonable distance of a university (as these sources are available through Interlibrary Lending) or has access to the Internet (as the post-graduate material is mostly available in electronic format).

The reader will notice that the publisher is not always identified. The simple explanation for this is that these sources form part of either masters- or doctoral work, published as monographs, or is the sole possession of the tertiary institution. These details are therefore not recorded in a library catalogue. A simple search on the Internet using either the author's name or the title of the work, will give the reader access to the material. Here follows a short bibliography:
